FAR WEST SKI FOUNDATION

Foundation Sets Sights for 2014: Members, industry partners and friends of the Association are the principal, historic and continuing donors to the Far West Ski Foundation – which in turn supports, through grants, some very important and high-profile programs. The Foundation acts on behalf of organized snow sports and provides a convenient avenue for tax-deductible contributions to athletic scholarships, women's ski jumping, adaptive skiing and rehabilitation and education. The Foundation provided over $10,000 in grants in 2013. We'd like to enhance our scholarship grants for promising young skiers "on the way up" in 2014. The Women's Ski Jumping Team will start a rebuilding process. We had great response to the Vail Veterans Program for injured military skiers and to the Snowbasin Adaptive Sports Foundation, and we would like to increase these grants. Our education and ski history mission will soon be consumed by the new Squaw Valley Museum. With support from our traditional friends, we hope to top that $10,000 this year---the Foundations' 50th YEAR. Contributions may be made through the web page: farwestskifoundation.org.

HELI-SKIING GUIDE CAUGHT IN AVALANCHE

A 31-year-old Bend, Oregon native heli-ski guide, Aaron Karitis, was buried in an avalanche on Saturday, March 15, in an Alaskan back country area known as Kicking Horse Valley.

Aaron was a very experienced heli-ski guide with Southeast Alaska Backcountry Skiing Adventure (SEABA) and was flown up 4,000 feet on the mountain with four clients to ski down. He was finishing his condition-check precautions when the slide was triggered. His four clients and fellow guides were not caught in the avalanche and were able to rescue him because he was wearing a locator beacon. Aaron was buried under 7 feet of snow for about twenty minutes and was unconscious when found. Unfortunately, Aaron passed away on March 17th from his injuries. He was to have been one of our guest speakers at this year's convention. For anyone lucky enough to meet this incredible young man, he was truly a shining star.

This avalanche followed one, 30 feet deep, which hit the High Campbell chairlift, the highest of 10 chairlifts, at Crystal Mountain Resort on Mount Rainier, Washington on March 11. The avalanche was intentionally triggered by the Ski Patrol, who threw a 40-pound explosive on unstable snow as a safety precaution on a slope known as "The Throne" in the High Campbell basin. "That got a bigger result than any of us anticipated" stated Tiana Enger, Crystal Mountain's marketing director. It brought down more snow than expected and wiped out a chairlift. Luckily, no one was injured. The area had been closed, and the explosion was set off at 4:45 p.m. Monday after the resort had closed. However, the slide knocked the lower terminal off its foundation and toppled one of about 10 towers.

This is the time of the year that the snow is softening, and we ALL need to be more careful and aware of where we are skiing. Be safe out there, when you're enjoying your Spring Skiing!
